

Breaking the vicious circle of the Eurozone debt crisis

Research by Paul De Grauwe influenced the European Central Bank in its management of the debt crisis that threatened to break up the Eurozone

What was the problem?

Th

private holders of government debt – giving them greater protection in the event of a default – would encourage those Professor Paul De Grauwe is John Paulson Chair in European Political Economy at the European Institute, London School of Economics. He was a member of the Belgian parliament from 1991 to 2003. He is honorary doctor of the University of Sankt Gallen (Switzerland), the University of Turku (Finland), the University of Genoa and the University of Valencia. He was a visiting professor at various universities: Paris, Amsterdam, Berlin, Kiel, Milan, Pennsylvania and Michigan. He obtained his PhD from the Johns Hopkins University in 1974. He is a research fellow at the Centre for European Policy Studies in Brussels and area director “Macro, Money and Finance” at CESifo in Munich. His research interests are in the economics of monetary unions and behavioural macroeconomics. His book publications include “The Economics of Monetary Union”, Oxford University Press, 9th Edition, 2012, and Lectures on Behavioral Macroeconomics”, Princeton University, 2012, in the European Institute at LSE.

Email: p.c.de-grauwe@lse.ac.uk

Webpage <http://www.lse.ac.uk/europeanInstitute/staff/academicStaff/DeGrauwe/Home.aspx>

<http://www.lse.ac.uk/researchImpact>

©LSE2014