

Reforming the intrusive application process for treating infertility

It would be unthinkable to address parental fitness

Research impact: making a difference

A recent empirical research study looking at the way fertility clinics assess child welfare attributed public debate over the assessment process in part to Professor Jackson's work. Other jurisdictions have also cited Professor Jackson's arguments, notably Victoria, Australia, where