We are delighted to invite you to our virtual roundtable to discuss new trends in implementation and enforcement in trade and sustainable development provisions in the European Union and beyond.

Why this event?

The aim of the event will be to discuss some of the key findings of our recent LSE TPH's comparative analysis of the impact of policy-mix on society, as well as to discuss a research agenda, which can further inform the ongoing debate on how to maximise the impact of Trade and Sustainable Development (TSD) provisions through innovative implementation and enforcement practices.

What happens next?

The outcome of the event will set out important next steps for research to strengthen the monitoring, implementation and enforcement of TSD provisions. In turn, this will become a core part of the work of the Trade Implementation and Enforcement Research Network (TIER), a new international policy research program funded by UACES – University Association for Contemporary European Studies.

What is the TIER network?

The TIER network aims to bring together and develop different strands of research exploring the negotiation, implementation and enforcement of trade provisions. TIER comprises PhD students, Early Career Researchers and senior scholars not only from the United Kingdom and the European Union, but across the globe. The network was founded by Dr Elitsa Garnizova and is hosted by the New Bulgarian University (NBU) in Sofia, Bulgaria.
