

Portugal

Portuguese children are the leaders of internet access with laptops, which is a direct consequence of national policies promoting laptop access for all children. However, they are among those who use internet less frequently and in narrower ways, which can account for the relatively low level of risk reported. In spite of these results, older children in Portugal report excessive use, which may have more to do with anxieties